SUMMARY.

In spite of heavy rain, the Allies continue to advance along the whole Western front. Six great battles are raging on a total front of 100 miles.

The German soldier, it is stated, is still fighting well, but he is not the man he was. The British and Belgians continue their progress in the centre.

They have crossed the Roovers-Mentel and Roovers-Dorren railways.

The British are three miles from Courtrai. A further big advance has been made towards Thourout.

The progress of the British threatens the enemy hold on the Belgium seaboard.

Sir Douglas Haig reports that operations continued satisfactorily on the St. Quentin salient battlements.

The British made a considerable advance eastwards on the high ground east of Valenciennes, north-west of St. Quentin.

The British have been severely engaged in the Cambrai and the Sambre River. They encountered fierce hostile forces.

Sir Douglas Haig's troops made progress in the direction of the northern suburb of Cambrai.

The Germans admit that the British gained a footing in the salient in the direction of the First French Army, co-operating with the British in the region of St. Quentin, has achieved important results.

The troops pursuing the retreating enemy at the extreme tip of the salient, which is cut off from the north.

The Germans are still stubbornly resisting at the extreme tip of the salient, which is cut off from the north.

South of St. Quentin the French proceeded into the Hindenburg line at a point 200 miles east of Cambrai.

On the Vesle the third French army's victorious progress has been crowned with success.

The Germans have fallen back along the whole line between the Aisne and the Rhine frontier.

American forces have advanced their line in the Argonne Forest. Patrols passed beyond the Vesle.

The Governor-General of Belgium has instructed the Governor of the occupied provinces to send the archives to Germany.

Seven hundred large vans have arrived in Brussels, in order to take the German officers' furniture to Germany.

German soldiers state that the German offensive in Belgium began last week.

The Belgians are fighting in the north of Belgium. The streets were crowded, and the police were required to restrain the mob clamouring for peace.

Vienna messengers state that Austria-German troops from Roumania are already ready to go. Large forces have already arrived.

They hope to overthrow the Malinoff regime, and to re-establish the moral of the Bulgarian army.

It is reported that Germany intends to use Bulgaria's action as a pretext for making a decisive peace offer.

The German Emperor has accepted the resignation of Count Hertling (the Chancellor) of Dr. von Hofme (Foreign Minister).

King Ferdinand of Bulgaria has arrived in Vienna.

Military circles anticipate a new campaign in the Balkans against the Austrians and Germans.

The enemy is not likely to allow the Russians to reach the Danube without strong resistance.

There is already some concentration of enemy troops at Nijni.

The Russian troops west of Lake Odessa are still retreating vigorously.

A British capital ship, the Albatross, and September 15, 1918, of whom 273 were officers. About 1000 guns were captured.

American advisers report that Damascus is surrounded by the British, who have captured 1000 trucks.

French cavalry are advancing on Beyrout.

The Governor-General has cabled congratulating the British and Allied Governments on the success on the various fronts.

Mr. Watt, referring to the subject in the House, thought they did well to express the confidence in the various fronts.

Mr. Toller said there could be no two opinions on the present position of the Allies. He hoped an honorable and lasting peace would soon be brought about.

The members of the French Mission were entertained at luncheon by the Institute of Journalists and Publicists.

Dr. Siegfried thanked the Press of Australia for what he had said about France since the beginning of the war.

Mr. J. A. Simpson, formerly Chief Justice in England, died at Hunter's Hill yesterday at the age of 75.

Further progress was made with the session by the Legislative Council, which passed the Bill in its present form.

The Bill was passed by the Legislative Council by a majority of 10.

A long discussion followed on a proposal by Mr. Watt to amend the Bill in the House.

CHAPTER XXVII. A SINISTER DEVELOPMENT.

On the way to the Puttenplatz I made a little fairy tale to account for my visit to the Jew, Graum. I didn't like to tell him that Rosa had told me about his relations with the police didn't make it any pleasant.

A very little knowledge of German police ways was enough to render it quite credible that he was just the sort of low cunning which would thrive with the methods. There were plenty of people, besides aliens, who were anxious to get out of Berlin at such a time, and it would suit the authorities admirably to have this secret means of finding out who they were and acting accordingly.

Rosa's description of the Puttenplatz was not a very pleasant one. It was a place, with mean shops of the poorest sort. The Jew's second-hand clothes' shop was one of the meanest and dirtiest, and Graum himself fitted thoroughly into the picture.

When I entered he was bargaining with a man who wanted to sell him a coat, and while the transaction proceeded, while the Jew was beating down the price at the last moment, that is—had ample time to observe him.

Red-haired, with red tumbled hair and white, prominent eyes, and a nose of the top of his nose, he was one of the most repulsive specimens one could wish to avoid.

"What do you want?" he asked in a high-pitched rasping voice, quivering at me, when his customer went out, cursing him for the smallness of the amount he had received for the coat.

I told him straight out. The remembrance of Feldmann's tip was one reason, and my desire not to stop on an unnecessary moment in such unsavoury surroundings was another.

He shook his head. "You've come to the wrong shop, my man. Given up all that sort of thing long ago. Too risky."

"All right; sorry to have troubled you. Good-day," I replied calmly, and turned to leave. He let me get to the door and then called me back. "Wait a moment. Who sent you here?"

"No one in particular. It's pretty well known, isn't it?"

"Here, wait. Come here. I know some one who might be able to do it for you. It isn't of the least consequence," I said with an airy wave of the hand.

"I told the man and just tell him how he lost his card."

"Come in here a minute," and he shuffled off to a back of the shop.

I hesitated, took a couple of paces toward him, stopped and shook my head. "I don't want to have anything to do with it. If there's any risk attached to it as you say."

"This worked all right. When I said that, I thought you wanted it for yourself," he said slyly.

I burst out laughing and turned again as if to go away. "Good-day, my friend. That's rich and no mistake."

"Here, don't be in such a hurry," he said, coming a step toward me. "If your friend's in any trouble, I might—"

"What the devil do you mean by that?" I cried, and cursed him royally for the suggestion.

He came up and laid his filthy claw on my sleeve. I shook it off with another curse, and he spit or two. "Come into my room. I'll show you some sort of other, and I have to be careful. If the police know anything, well, that's their business. I'm not to indicate the trouble it would mean for him."

"All right, but don't try to get with me. Either you can sell what I've asked for, or you can't. So out with it. I don't care which way it is; and this place of yours stinks so that I don't want to stop in it and be suffocated."

He leered as if this were rather a good joke or a compliment. "I might be able to manage it, but—"

I broke in with an impatient oath. "I don't want any 'might be.' Can you or can't you? Be quick about it. If you can, how much?"

"This was evidently the right line with him, and he grinned appreciatively.

"That's the way to talk. Shall we say 150 marks?"

"How much?" I cried with a regular spasm of astonishment. "Say it again, man."

"A hundred and fifty marks." "Do you think I want to deal wholesale and set up in the business myself? I only want one—you infernal old shyster!" and I roared with laughter.

He was accustomed to being abused, and joined in the laughing, but his face grew red as he heard with his filthy fingers. "Well, how much then?"

"Oh, a couple of marks or so."

He threw up his hands, gesturing violently. "This was an insult, and I'm not going to work myself into a furious rage and fume and fume and fume, until I get up and in my hand I hold the door of the shop following with a mixture of lamentations and supplications to Heaven to bear witness to my lunacy."

I did not so much as turn round, remembering Feldmann's caution, and was all but in the street before he changed his tone, apparently satisfied that I was not going to take it over again. "Once more a similar pantomime was played, but this time I was much slower to give way. 'It can't be done at the price, impossible. Think of the risk I should—'

"Then don't do it. I tell you if you mean there's any risk in the thing, I won't touch it with a ten-foot pole. I thought a few marks was all that would be necessary, but if you offered to give me for nothing, and there's any risk, I wouldn't take it. I'd take it into your head."

"You think I give things away?"

"Not I, seeing how you cling to the dirt, do you?"

"This was also accepted as a joke, and he wagged his head and winked. "It takes too much time to clean things, and time's money, so I've decided to let you have it for nothing. But I like you. You say what you mean. I'll take a hundred marks from you."

"Will you?" "You'll be cleverer than I take you for, if you do."

"But there's the risk. He was going to repeat about the risk, but checked the word as he had business; and a long chattering began in which he tried to suggest me first to fifty-five marks, then to fifty, coming down by tens and fives to twenty-five."

He sat at that point a long time; and I should think even that sum suspicious. I held out at the five marks to which I had increased my offer during the bargaining.

Once more he let me all but leave the shop, and when he again called me back, he refused to go and struck out a fresh line.

"I'll tell you why I've stopped so long as it is, Graum. I said, 'I've never met any one quite like you before, and you're a very interesting character. I do something at times in theatres and you're worth seeing. I've had enough of you now. I've been worth a few marks to have such a chance as this, while I don't care two straws whether I get what brought me here or not. I'll give you five marks for the fun I've had, and to his consummate astonishment I put the money in his dirty palm. 'If I were you, I'd spend it on soap or something that will get rid of some of this beastly stink.'"

"You give me this?" "Good-day."

It was the turning point of the conference. He claved hold of my arm. "You can come and study me any time like the same price," or said with a grin. "I don't mind how often. And look here, you shall have the card if you'll make it ten marks."

"Another five, do you mean?"

"Oh, no. Oh, no. Another ten," he cried speedily.

I shook my head at first and then smiled. "I tell you what I'll do. I'll give you the other ten, if you'll throw in another cursing and lamentation scene, like the last. Five for that and five for the card. You say what you mean. I'll give you the card if you'll put on 'I know.'"

He grinned, but shook his head. "I won't."

"You're a dirty, stinking, money-grabbing Jew, Graum. I cried, with every appearance of force and earnestness."

He seemed to take it as meant, and he did repeat the cursing scene with the utmost energy and with gusto to my intense amusement.

"It wasn't quite so good as the first time, but it's worth the money all the same. Here you are; get me the card, and believe you're quite a decent sort really and just out on this manner for business."

More leers as he shuffled off, and in a minute or two he was an indistinct figure, minute or two in the name of "Johann Liebsch, mechanic."

Whether he would tell the police of my visit, I neither knew nor cared. He was obviously satisfied that things were pretty much as he pretended, and the little hint that I might wish to "study" him again was quite likely to make him build his tongue.

He had all that I needed; the way to leave was now open; and in a very few hours Rosa and I would have seen the last of Berlin for many a day.

WOMEN'S COLUMN.

BABY WELFARE CONFERENCE.

The Baby Welfare Conference was continued at the Assembly Hall, Educational Buildings, yesterday afternoon. Lady Davidson, in the present, and also a representative body of men and women already associated with the work, presided over the conference.

The inauguration of a band of mother helpers or nursing aids to cooperate with the trained nurses in rendering assistance in the home at the time of the confinement, or previously if necessary, was enthusiastically endorsed by those present. Several speakers spoke of the necessity for improved housing conditions, and said that landlords should be prevented from building upon too thickly populated areas.

Dr. Parker made many practical suggestions in the matter of pre-natal treatment, and the care of mothers and babies. He also suggested that groups of senior girls should be sent to the Baby Hospital at Greyfriars, and be given instruction in the care of sick children, and in general mothercraft. Delegates from the various branches made applications for branch centres, and expressed their approval of the scheme. Helpful comments and criticisms were given by Miss Blumfield, Mrs. Mayne, Mrs. Vanderveld, Mrs. MacCallum, and Mrs. Boga Luffman.

FROM NEAR AND FAR.

The opening ceremony of the House Badge Drive in connection with Soldiers' Dependents' Day was performed by Lady Davidson at the Town Hall on Wednesday. Her Excellency and the Hon. Mr. Davidson, accompanied by the first ladies to the window of the building, after which detachments of the various regiments, and their attack upon the business houses in the city.

A meeting was held in the Lady Mayors' room at the Town Hall, on Wednesday morning to discuss the arrangements that are being made for the Red Cross House Badge Drive, which will be held on October 19. It was decided that the public should vote by ballot for the best designs, and that a box will be supplied by each stand. Voters may record their selection on payment of a shilling.

The 1st and 3rd Battalion Comforts Fund and friends and helpers to send any donations or goods for "Jack's Day" still to their depot at Eastway, 330 George-street. This fund has just received a large number of donations from the front from the girls of Lassetters and Co.'s "Win the War" campaign.

Mrs. Eaton will preside at the annual meeting of the Army Service Corps Comforts Fund at the Oxford Hall on Tuesday next at 2 p.m.

On Saturday, September 28, Mrs. Jack Hill, of Helvetia, Mosman, gave a linen tea to both Lamb in honour of her approaching marriage. Among the guests were Messdames H. Lamb, Rutter, Wenden, Angles, Davidson, Gattie, Lumsden, and the Misses Lamb, Huff, Laing, and Harrison.

A garden fête and tennis tournament in aid of the Rawick Hospital for Infants will be held at Dr. Gates' residence, Cronulla, on Saturday, October 5. Mrs. L. M. A. is to open the fête at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Howie is hon. treasurer, and Mrs. Gates hon. secretary. The organisers are endeavouring to collect £1000 for the cause.

The Royal Naval Friendly Union of Sailors' wives held their usual fortnightly afternoon tea at the Royal Naval House on Wednesday for the efforts that are to be put forth on Jack's Day. The business was Messdames Glasgow, Dunn, Bond, Nixon, Stevenson, Canning, Grace, Douglas, Brand, Ford, Misses Windley, Henderson, Corbett. The union will conduct a stall at the corner of Moore and Pitt streets on "Jack's Day."

The death of Mrs. Daniel, one of the oldest and most respected residents of the western district, occurred on Saturday last, at her daughter's residence, 143 Macleay-street, Potts Point. The deceased was the widow of the late S. B. Daniel, Commissioner of Crown Lands, Wellington, N.S.W. Although she had arrived at the great age of 87 she was the keener of patriotic workers. A soldier went to the front that she knew without one of her own knitted comforters and socks. She leaves four sons and one daughter, the last-named being Mrs. James Shee.

The ladies who provide the regular entertainments for soldiers at the Pitt-street Congregational Hall are gratified at the success which has attended their laudable efforts.

The programme on Monday evening was supplied by the pupils of Mr. Charles Smythe among those who contributed being Misses Martyn, Phyllis Hazel, Pheng, Hunt, Clinch, Mrs. Corbett and Mr. Hunt. The band also sang several of his favourite numbers, and was accorded a hearty reception. Mr. Velland provided a charming entertainment, and Miss Lillian Frost was the accompanist. There was large attendance of men in khaki, who were served with refreshments.

THE VETERANS' HOME.

Lady Davidson presided at the annual meeting of the Veterans' Home of New South Wales, which was held at Government House on Wednesday afternoon. The speakers included Mrs. Hugh Bussell, president, Mrs. Rutter, hon. secretary, Mrs. Thornton, hon. treasurer, Major-General, Lord Major-General, Wallack, Captain Brownlow, and Major Lynch.

All the speakers spoke of the importance of making preparations for the future and putting the institution on such a firm footing that it would be prepared to meet whatever demands should be made upon it in the days to come. General Wallack stated that he would like to see the home conducted on the same lines as the celebrated Veterans' Home at Chelsea, and suggested that in the future a veterans' home should be organised, not only for the purpose of raising funds, but also to bring the work more prominently before the public.

"Will you?" "You'll be cleverer than I take you for, if you do."

But there's the risk. He was going to repeat about the risk, but checked the word as he had business; and a long chattering began in which he tried to suggest me first to fifty-five marks, then to fifty, coming down by tens and fives to twenty-five."

TORTURING, ITCHING ECZEMA

On Face, Hands, and Feet,
CURED BY ZAM-BUK.

ECZEMA generally begins in the form of slightly reddened patches, on which appear tiny heads. These heads burst, and a small, thin crust of a bright red hue then forms. The parts most frequently affected by eczema, are behind the ears, the scalp, the mouth corners, and between the fingers and toes.

No remedy is more soothing and efficacious for eczema than Zam-Buk.

Zam-Buk should be applied on a fresh piece of lint, night and morning, after a thorough cleansing with some germ-killing soap, preferably Zam-Buk Medical Soap, which has been specially invented for the use of skin sufferers.

The burning, itching pain is allayed by this treatment, and perseverance results in a new healthy skin taking the place of the scabs and scales.

Sydney Lady's Eczema. Zam-Buk Earns Great Praise.

Mrs. B. J. Ingram, Oxford-street, Strathfield, Sydney, says:—Through the after-effects of vaccination, many outbreaks of eruptions appeared on my face, hands, and feet. The intense itching irritation was unbearable, and I used to rub and scratch my fingers and stamp my feet to get relief. My skin was in a shocking state, and I lived in daily fear lest the disease should spread to the other parts of my body.

"When the eczema was at its worst I procured a pot of Zam-Buk and gently applied the balm all over the affected surface. Zam-Buk proved wonderfully mild and soothing, and it brought speedy relief from the burning, itching, and smarting. I got what I needed; the way to leave was now open; and in a very few hours Rosa and I would have seen the last of Berlin for many a day."

Zam-Buk is a reliable healing Balm for eczema, eruptions, sores, ringworms, ulcers, blood poisoning, festering sores, bad legs, sore feet, piles, itch, and other skin diseases, and injuries. Sold by all Chemists and Stores at 1/6 per pot, or large family tins, 3/6; or post free from C. E. FULFORD (Aust.), Ltd., 25 Pitt-street, Sydney.

STATE PARLIAMENT
SEDITION BILL.

Reading more information," said Mr. Crampton, "the Federal Government should inquire into the situation, any more than the State Government should inquire into the carriage business."

Answering Colonel Qualow, Mr. Hall (Minn.) said there were delinquencies in shipbuilding in some of the States. But at present vessels could be built much faster if material could be obtained. He thought the War Relocation Authority Company would shortly be in a position to supply all the plates wanted by the Navy Department. The Detention (Amendment) and Jury (Amendment) Bills were received from the Legislature of New York.

Mr. Havin resumed the debate on the second reading of the Sedition Bill, and agreed with his opponents, but could not see how they could get it through in the form of the measure. If it expired made on facts before him at the time, and whilst accepting the Acting Prime Minister's assurance respecting the blankets, he

The third readings of the Prisoners' Pensions Bill (Amendment) and the Jury Amendment Bill were agreed to, and the House passed the bill introduced by Mr. Hume, which was given to introduce a bill from the Baptist Union of New South Wales, and to visit it in premises now held by the Government. The bill was presented, and other steps in connection with it set down for consideration.

MR. MR. BEEBY.

GOING TO AMERICA.

Mr. G. S. Beeby, Minister for Labour and Industry, stated last night that he proposed to go to America for the purpose of investigating into the development of industrial relations in that country. He expects to be absent for about two or three weeks, and to be absent for five or six months.

The Premier yesterday afternoon, in reply to a question put by Mr. Beeby, who asked whether Mr. Beeby was going to America for the Government, and what object.

The Premier (Mr. Holman) said Mr. Beeby was going to America for the Government to inquire into the industrial situation in that country.

of the welfare of the workers, profit sharing and co-operation.

The funeral of Mrs. J. B. Christian, who was 65 years of age, took place at 10 o'clock this morning at South Road Baptist Church. The funeral was held at 10 o'clock this morning at South Road Baptist Church. The funeral was held at 10 o'clock this morning at South Road Baptist Church.
